Dear participants of the Conference and colleagues!

I would like to start my welcoming speech with the statement that scientific ideas, their implementation in the form of applied developments generate high technology, which, in turn, leads to the creation of both material and intellectual products.

It should be noted that the research work at the university is an integral part of the building block of the world science.

The International Scientific and Practical Conference is devoted on “Reflection of the mentality in different cultures” and focuses on current advances in the in the development of the linguistic and semiotic research, and their use in practical semiotics and linguistics.

The goal the conference is to provide a scientific information for all international prestige scholars around the world and enable the interactive exchange of scientific knowledge in linguistics as well as semiotics.

I wish you all success, scientific discoveries and brilliant introduction to your intellectual development in theory and practice.

I am confident that our forum representatives will make a significant contribution to solve modern social problems of linguistics, semiotics as well as regional studies and bring all the countries closer together.
